Dear Brother:--

There is one thing I am trying to do, and that is to get right with God. To do this I have a duty to do in getting right with my fellow men.

I realize that my attitude toward you as expressed in words has not been what it should be, or as I shall wish to meet it in the judgment. I have not always spoken to you in a Christian manner, when under provocation. This I must overcome. Now, I do not suppose you and I will ever agree in business methods and business matters. But I believe I can be a Christian in the way I meet matters of this kind. I am heartily sorry for every hasty, sharp word I have spoken, and every unchristian statement that I have made in regard to you. Please forgive.

From Your Brother,

J. E. White
