Dear brother,---

I was at Mountain View last week, and Brethren Jones and Gage told me of your correspondence with them, asking for help to find a man that could translate into Spanish the <sup>poetical</sup> A B C portion of your "Gospel Primer" No. 2. Professor Bransby does not want to undertake it, and he does not name any one, but suggests that we go to our people in Spain.

It has occurred to me that as you come west, you ought to make inquiry among our people for some one who understand the Spanish and has poetical ambitions or poetical tendencies.

While you are with Rennings, he may be able to direct you to some one in New Mexico. If not, make inquiry at Loma Linda, and if there is no one there or in the neighborhood, get the address of Mrs. De Angeles who is in medical school in Los Angeles, I think. She is an interesting woman, and you would enjoy meeting her. If she will not undertake it and cannot direct you to some one who will, ask her to direct you to Professor Gallegues. He is a celebrated Spanish teacher, a young man full of wisdom and conceit. I think he could do the work or find some one who would undertake it. If all these efforts fail, we can introduce you to some Spanish translators in San Francisco and Palo Alto.

When you get here, Brother James can give you quotations on olives. At the time we received your letter last September, olives were scarce and high-priced; but recently good olives are being offered at moderate prices, and I think there are two or three packers that we can refer you to who would make you reasonable figures.

Do not run by these spanish translators trusting some one else to look them up by correspondence. Your only sure way is to meet them individually and talk matters over with them.

Yours very truly,
