Dear Brother

Your inquiry of February 15 has been in my letter drawer for several months, not because I have not been interested in it, or because I have been disinclined to reply, but because I thought possibly I might find the quotation you enclosed, reading thus:

"Many boys and girls will not grow to be men and women. The crisis of the ages will come while they are yet children."

Thus purports to be a quotation from an article by Mrs. E. G. White in a copy of REVIEW AND HERALD.

I have been shown this quotation by several, and some besides yourself have written in, making inquiry of us as to its source. Up to the present time, we have been unable to find the statement anywhere in any of Sister White's writings. Until we find it, or some one else can find it, we will remain inclined to the belief that it has been written by some one else, or else has not been copied properly.

It is unfortunate that we can not inform you more fully concerning this matter. If ever we learn more about it, we will take pleasure in letting you know our findings.

Yes; that Australian friend of yours is now Mrs. C. We are in a cottage near the office, and shall be pleased to see
