August 19, 1973.

Dear Brother White:

Our attention has just been called to the fact that an extrate from the stomach of swine is now being used in the manufacture of Kraft cheese. I asked for a copy of the letter containing this information, which Brother Williams, the owner of our store here, loaned me long enough for me to run off a copy. I slipped in an extra carbon so that I could send one to you, just in case you have not heard of this. You may want to check with the Kraft Company direct to verify this fact. I wish it were not true, for we have used Velveeta Kraft cheese through the years, which we thought very mild and harmless. Of course, we never use very much, but if this report is true, we dare not use any of it any more.

Possibly your attention has already been called to this matter, but we had not heard of it until now.

Best wishes to all at the White Publications!

Sincerely,

No 48
